THURSDAY MORNING, JULY 30, 1863.

The Government, from the moment when about the triumphal entry into Washington, to this time, has wasted its energies not so much in preparing for a long war as for a speedy peace. There have been mammoth victories in perspective, which have never come to pass; there have been intervention rumors without number, and also without foundation : and there have been Northern revolutions whose dimensions thus far have reached not self, and the country has slept. At his moment, succeeding serious reverses in the East and in the West, a dead calm rests upon the mists upon the valleys, and it clings, like sun-liancy set clouds in sweet fantasy about the mountains. Out of it shoot the illusive rays of hope, that balm to the sore in spirit, but that equally false monitor to the needy of purpose we are authorized to senous e Colonel G.
